2. Protects the religious integrity and character of faith-based organizations that are willing to accept government funds to provide services to the needy.
3. Safeguards the religious freedom of beneficiaries, both those willing to receive services from religious organizations and those who object to receiving services.

Notice regarding Charitable Choice Regulations to Individuals Receiving Substance Abuse Services

No provider of substance abuse services receiving Federal funds from the U.S. Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, including this organization, may discriminate against you on the basis of religion, a religious belief, a refusal to hold a religious belief, or a refusal to actively participate in a religious practice.

If you object to the religious character of this organization, Federal law gives you the right to a referral to another provider of substance abuse services. The referral, and your receipt of alternative services, must occur within a reasonable time after you request them. The alternative provider must be accessible to you and have the capacity to provide substance abuse services. The services provided to you by the alternative provider must be of value not less than the value of the services you would have received from this organization.

CHRISTIAN TASK

The Council recommends that the World YWCA should encourage and assist national associations during the next four years to study anew what is involved in being a Christian movement in today's world, and what implications this has for program, membership policies, purpose statements and leadership within the association...All national associations should be involved in this study and not only those who wish.

1995, World Council, Seoul, Korea

From SAMHSA/CSAT Presentation

How might you determine if your program is faith-based?

1. Do you consider sharing your faith as an essential part of the services your organization provides?
2. Is participation in activities and rituals considered necessary to successful recovery?
3. Are your social services a means of recruiting members into your organization?
4. Do you consider it your obligation to convert others to your religion?
5. Do you make a distinction between religion and spirituality?

- Faith based providers may permit employment discrimination on the grounds of religion.

- Religious organizations may not compel beneficiaries to actively participate in religious practice.
